

'Into Oblivion'

Sometimes,
you spend your life
trying to learn to forget,
but to live
you forget.

Live to forget is not living.

Learn to forget... is even possible?

Nonsense
fills your mind,
and then,
the thought of forgiveness
becomes attractive.

To forgive the unforgivable... is that fair?

I don't believe in forgiveness.
I just forget
what not worth to remember is.

Is it enough?

Forgetting to forgive? Forgiving to forget?

True living is existing with no shackles
and being able to fly away.

'Cause when you forget,
the chains of sorrow are left behind,
and without knowing
again you're living.

There are no more lessons of forgiveness,
I'm already beyond that.

This is what I've learned,
what I believe in.

There are experiences,
there are people,
not worth to forgive...
but worth to forget.